

...the Palo Alto Art Center and the Palo Alto Unified School District are celebrating the imaginations of area students by hosting the annual Youth Art exhibition, which started Sunday and will run through June 1.

The opening reception was planned for Wednesday.

The Palo Alto Art Center Foundation was set to recognize two graduating seniors with a high level of achievement in the art programs at glass and mixed media works, selected by class instructors for innovation and accomplishment within the curriculum, are featured.

For example, students in Erik Bowman's class at Jordan Middle School have constructed sculptures of figures. They studied the sculpture of Deborah Butterfield, as well as the points of a human body, and learned to construct expressive sculptures using drift wood held together with poses, said Patty Larrick, the district's art coordinator.

Linda Craighead, director of the Palo Alto Art Center, said the work of the students is a reflection of the district commitment to maintaining quality art programs.

"It is a testament to the value of arts education in the curriculum and an enriching cultural benefit for the entire community."

Give Zack some attention and he will flop over on his side with appreciation.
