Italy apologizes for film posters

The Italian distributor of the film "12 Years a Slave" has apologized for promotional posters attacked as racist for featuring Brad Pitt and Michael Fassbender, despite their relatively minor roles, and not the film's star, Chiwetel Ejiofor.

BIM Distribuzione said in a statement Monday the "inappropriate materials have now been withdrawn" and expressed "regret any distraction this incident may have caused." BIM said the new posters feature only Ejiofor, who has been nominated for a Golden Globe for his portrayal of a freed black man who is abducted and sold into slavery.

The distributor said the posters featuring Pitt and Fassbender were aimed at "giving wide representation of what is told in the film itself."

The film by director Steve McQueen opens in February in Italy.

Vegas' New Year's Eve about big names, bashes

Sin City is set to ring in 2014 with big-name concerts, celebrity-hosted parties and an eight-minute rooftop fireworks display billed as the nation's largest.

John Legend is performing at Haze nightclub at Aria, Ne-Yo is welcoming the new year at Pure nightclub at Caesars Palace and Maroon 5 is playing at Mandalay Bay. Pop star Bruno Mars is christening the Cosmopolitan's new Chelsea Ballroom. The show will be broadcast live on the casino's 65-foot marquee to ice skaters at a rooftop rink and partiers on the Strip below.

Other casinos are touting pricey nightclub bashes with $3,000 bottle service and open bars hosted by reality-TV and music celebrities, including the original celebratante, Paris Hilton.

BOOKS

Best kids' reads in 2013

By Sonja Bolle
Newsday

If you have a voracious young book-lover in the family, you know that the appetite for new books is bottomless. Here are our favorite books of 2013 for small children, middle readers and young adults.

IF YOU WANT TO SEE A WHALE

by Julie Fogliano, illustrated by Erin E. Stead (Roaring Brook, $16.99, ages 3-7).

Babies take their sweet time about everything, but by preschool, it's rush-rush-rush! "If You Want to See a Whale" slows all that down. "If you want to see a whale," the book begins, "you will need a window... and an ocean ... and time for waiting." It's all about contemplation. So tuck up together. Read aloud. This is a form of mindfulness meditation for children. And their parents. Especially the parents.

FANGIRL

by Rainbow Rowell (St. Martin's Press, $18.99, ages 14 and up)

Plenty of YA novelists employ texting and blogging and other devices of technologically enabled expression. But while other writers seem to be explaining why young people are always staring at a screen, Rowell's "Fangirl" character, a first-year college student, doesn't need to explain anything: she lives there. All her dramas — involving a roommate, a boyfriend, a study partner, a twin sister, a fragile parent — are filtered through her secret persona as queen of a popular writer's online fan circle.

EXCLAMATION MARK!

by Amy Krause Rosenthal and Tom Lichtenheld (Scholastic, $17.99, all ages)

Like a perfect marriage of beauty and brains, the idea and graphics in this book are easier to appreciate than to describe. An animated exclamation mark, trying to line up on a page with more sedate punctuation, is unintentionally exuberant. He may try to curl up his long tail and blend in with the periods, but it's in his nature to shout! When he meets the question mark, he learns the proper use of his exclamatory voice.

What's not to love about a girl who was raised in a brothel and chooses to run away and live in a bookshop?

MISTER MAX: The Book of Lost Things

by Cynthia Voigt, illustrated by Iacopo Bruno

(Knopf Books for Young Readers, $16.99, ages 8-12)

Max is one of the most fetching characters in recent children's fiction, so let's rejoice that "Mister Max: The Book of Lost Things" is only the first installment of what promises to be a delightful detective series. The pseudo-Victorian setting gives Voigt license to deploy a bit of Dickensian melodrama as well as a slightly formal style, which gives the intelligent reader a satisfying sense of having stretched.

OUT OF THE EASY

by Ruta Sepetys (Philomel, $17.99, ages 14 and up)

What's not to love about a girl who was raised in a brothel and chooses to run away and live in a bookshop? Josie is tough and streetwise and filled with secret hope, and her friends are as colorful a cast of characters as you'd hope to find in New Orleans. Sepetys wrote last year's "Between Shades of Gray," about a grim episode in Soviet history, and there couldn't be two more different novels. What will she do next?
