Philadelphia upgrading radios, helmets with convention grant

The city's federal security grant for the upcoming Democratic National Convention will total $43 million, an official said.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia is planning to upgrade its emergency radio system and buy some new helmets for its motorcycle unit with some of the millions of dollars it's getting to host the Democratic National Convention, the mayor's office said Tuesday.

The city's federal security grant for the convention will total $43 million, said Mike Dunn, a spokesman for Mayor Jim Kenney.

The initial spending plan includes more than $8 million for personnel; more than $9.6 million for supplies like batteries for smartphones and motorcycle helmets; and $7.7 million for bigger equipment purchases, including 800 megahertz public safety radios.

The Office of Emergency

Management will not provide a breakdown of how many radios or helmets or other emergency equipment it is buying, citing security reasons.

Spokeswoman Noelle Foizen said the helmets "will support dignitary transport during the convention."

The July 25-28 convention is expected to draw 50,000 visitors.

Cleveland was given about $50 million for security preparations ahead of the Republican National Convention it is hosting in July.

The city plans to buy 2,000 riot-control suits with collapsible batons.

Cleveland also had put out bids to buy more than 300 sets of long-sleeve jackets, gloves and shin guards.

That equipment would serve as riot-control gear for police officers riding bicycles.

The city also sought to buy 300 bicycles, 15 motorcycles, 25 sets of tactical armor and enough 3.5-foot-high interlocking steel barriers to cover about three miles.

The Philadelphia convention's host committee announced Tuesday it has recruited more than 16,000 volunteers to help out during the event.

"We are thrilled with the overwhelming level of support we have received so quickly from the Greater Philadelphia community and beyond," said Kevin Washo, the host committee's executive director. He said that exceeding the goal of 10,000 volunteers shows that "residents from across the city, region and country are excited about this event and want to be a part of it."

Prosecutor: Claim that coaches saw abuse unreliable

HARRISBURG (AP) — Pennsylvania prosecutors are dismissing as unreliable allegations that two assistant coaches at Penn State witnessed Jerry Sandusky having inappropriate or sexual contact with children in the late 1980s.

Solicitor General Bruce Castor says investigators found the reports to be third- and fourth-hand and weren't valuable to prosecutors.

A Philadelphia judge's ruling last week in a lawsuit by Penn State against an insurance company made public the insurer's claim an unnamed assistant coach saw "inappropriate contact" between Sandusky and a child in a school facility in 1987.

The order says another unidentified coach saw "sexual contact" between Sandusky and a child in 1988.

NOTICE OF OPEN-HOUSE PUBLIC INFORMATION SESSION

PERFLUORINATED COMPOUNDS IN DRINKING WATER

FORMER NASJRB WILLOW GROVE, PA
FORMER NAWC WARMINSTER, PA
HORSHAM AIR GUARD STATION, PA

The Naval Facilities Engineering Command Base Realignment and Closure Program Management Office (NAVFAC BRAC PMO) and the Air National Guard (ANG) are hosting open house public information sessions on MAY 24th and 25th, 2016 at the Horsham Township Community Center regarding current and future actions taken in response to the perfluorinated compounds (PFCs) found in drinking water. Specific PFCs known as perfluorooctane sulfonate (PFOS) and perfluorooctanoic acid (PFOA) have been found at public and private drinking water wells near the Former Naval Air Station Joint Reserve Base (NASJRB) Willow Grove, former Naval Air Warfare Center (NAWC) Warminster, and Horsham Air Guard Station (HAGS), Pennsylvania. Attending these public information sessions will be representatives from the U.S. Navy, Air National Guard, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Region 3, Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (ATSDR), Pennsylvania Dept. of Environmental Protection, Montgomery and Bucks County Health Departments, and local water authorities.

These sessions will be held in an OPEN HOUSE format with multiple information displays staffed by the various agency representatives, who will be available to talk one-on-one with residents and answer questions about PFOA and PFOS. Residents are encouraged to attend either session; the presented information will be the same at both sessions. Dates and times are shown below.

Information on other environmental restoration actions will also be available.
