in California, which represents about 250,000 Vietnamese, sought a retraction from City Councilman Tony Lam for allegedly attacking his group to the fire.

whose group will host a festival in Garden Grove, said he objected to unfair attacks against several Little Saigon businesses were set ablaze, beginning last week at Vien Dong, a restaurant owned by Lam, who is organizing a festival.

In a letter he sent to Lam on Monday, Bui wrote that Lam falsely accused newspapers that the fire at his restaurant was initiated by organizers of the Garden Grove festival.
In a statement, made before the investigation has [been] concluded, Bui is irresponsible, inflammatory and slanderous," Bui said.

Lam, who had not received the letter until Tuesday, denied that he attacked Bui's group.

"I never made such accusations," Lam said.

Bui added on Tuesday that he does not believe that there is any connection to the Garden Grove conflict is between the city suffer with the closing of Bolsa Avenue.

The controversy flared Feb. 13 when a fire of suspicious origin erupted at Lam's restaurant on Westminster Avenue. On Sunday, three fires were ignited at and nearby the Westminster Press, a paper storage facility that suffered an estimated $250,000 in damage, fire officials said.

"I have no comment on the weekend fires," Bui said. "We will have to wait to see what the investigators will determine."

Yen Do, editor of the Vietnamese-language Nguoi Viet Daily newspaper, said the community is abuzz over last week's fires. There are many speculations, Do said, ranging from those relating to this weekend's Tet festivals to people who might hold grudges against the family that owns Westminster Press.

Do, whose newspaper is near the paper storage facility, said most people tend to believe the fires are not related to the feud that has surrounded the Tet festivities, which usher in the lunar new year.

"Whoever picked this time [to set the fires] is very sophisticated,"
