A. Will Decide if as Factor in Case

Soo because it is a pending case. But in 1995, Glazier offered The Times an example of the difficulty of pursuing a hate crime case by offering the hypothetical example of two men hurling racial pejoratives during a brawl.

"It's not enough to just say someone used a racial slur," Glazier said at the time.

Koo Oh, president of the Korean-American Assn. of Orange County, said his group will monitor the case. "I don't know if it's really a hate crime, but these are sensitive times and we must all be careful," Oh said. "Things like this should not happen."

Neither Soo nor Hale could be reached for comment Wednesday.

Soo told police he did not want to comment publicly about the incident. "Mr. Soo said, 'No, I want this to be between that fellow [Hale], his wife and the court,'" Hume said Wednesday.

Hume said that no matter the outcome of the case, both men seemed to play a part in ratcheting up the ultimately violent confrontation. Both are also lucky that someone was not hurt more seriously, he said.

"I don't know why people do these things, why they can't do the mature thing and think about the cost of their actions," Hume said. "But people don't have much patience these days. And they're so much more aggressive. It's ridiculous and dangerous."

TOLLWAY South Co

Wayne Airport, shaving minutes off a drive that takes 45 minutes to an hour.

The $1.5-billion project is to be finished in 1998. It is the cornerstone of a major road program in South County that has been under construction since 1993.

Drivers will pay tolls ranging from $1 to $1.50, depending on the length of their trip, to travel through a segment that stretches from Greenfield Drive in Laguna Hills to Laguna Canyon Road in Newport Beach. Tolls can be paid in cash or by using toll transponders mounted on
